WHAT IS LASER THERAPY?

Lasers are used in many ways in veterinary medicine. The term "laser" is an acronym that means "light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation," and describes a device that changes the physiology of cells and tissue by means of light (photons). Therapeutic lasers use low levels of light energy to help reduce pain and inflammation, relax muscle, increase circulation and improve your pet's comfort. Laser therapy "kickstarts" your pet's healing and has the ability to:

- ✓ Speed up the healing of infections
- ✓ Increase mobility in pets with stiff, achy joints
- ✓ Improve blood circulation to the affected areas throughout the body
- ✓ Reduce pain, inflammation, and swelling

WHEN WILL I SEE RESULTS?

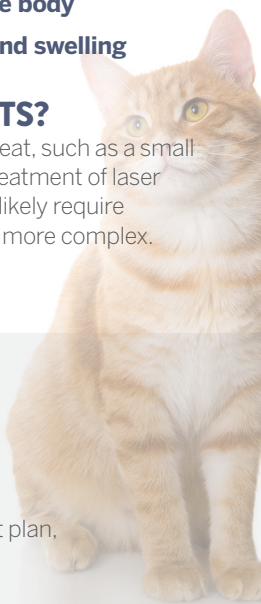

Many acute conditions are easier to treat, such as a small laceration, and may require a single treatment of laser therapy. Chronic health problems will likely require multiple treatments because they are more complex.

Results vary by patient.
